Goldberg said they were interested in getting a briefing on the situation in Korea and wondered if it would be best to go to the State Department or get the briefing from us. I suggested he get a briefing from State first and then if he felt there was anything we could fill in to let us know.

Goldberg mentioned that during a brief assignment on the staff of the Subcommittee on National Security and International Operations he was given a top secret clearance through the Department of Defense and wondered if they would suffice for our purposes. I told him that in general it would.

Zablocki (D., Wis.), Representatives Vernon Thomson (R., Wis.) and Ogden Reid (D., N.Y.), and staff members George Berdes, John Sullivan, and Everett Bierman, House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on National Security Policy and Scientific Developments, and gave them a short briefing on current status of Soviet strategic strength. The briefing updated the information previously provided by Mr. Duckett concerning Soviet ICBMs, submarines and SLBMs, bombers and naval vessels, defensive missiles and Soviet vessels in Cuban waters. The expected attendance of the full Subcommittee was frustrated by a roll call on the floor five minutes before the meeting was due to start and the gallery demonstrations that took place during the afternoon in the House chamber. There are no followups from today's briefing. 25X1
